Summary of the Hungarian National Debate on the Future of Europe

Contribution to the Convention Session on Civil Society

Brussels, 24-25 June, 2002

Presented by Mr. Pál Vastagh, member of the Convention

The launch of the Debate on the Future of Europe in Spring 2001 marked the increasingly proactive attitude of European Union institutions to find effective ways of more direct communication and contact with its citizens. Public debate is an important instrument of democracies. The involvement of candidate countries in the debate has had a double effect: it has extended the vision of the debate and brought new ideas and perspectives.

This document sums up the most important points of the "Future of Europe" debate in Hungary on the national level since its launch with particular emphasis on the involvement of citizens and civil organisations.

A great variety of programmes have been organised in Hungary since the launch of the debate in Hungary in June 2001. The key state institutions responsible for the advancement of the debate have been:

- The Hungarian National Assembly and its Committee on European Integration Affairs;
- The Hungarian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

President Mádl also launched the national homepage on the Future of Europe.

A National Response: Hungarian Civil Forum for European Integration

A recent development is the establishment of the "Hungarian Civil Forum for European Integration", a network of Hungarian NGOs with the (primary) purpose to co-ordinate their EU-related efforts. To date nearly 100 Hungarian civil society organisations have joined the network. It intends to serve as an open national forum following the recommendation of the Convention. It brings together views of various sectors of society including academia, social partners and others. It has already established close contacts with the Hungarian members of the Convention.

The national work of the Forum is helped by "Civil Europe" a fortnightly newsletter on civil society and European integration published in Hungarian and distributed electronically throughout the NGO sector in Hungary. It is a very useful instrument in promoting the Debate on the Future of Europe.

Europe Day

Europe Day was widely celebrated with varied programmes in different locations in Hungary including a central event in downtown Budapest, where a special "Europe Square" was created for the day with various presentations, cultural entertainment and games.

On the same day the "Europe Car" project was launched initiated by the European Information Point in the city of Szeged. During the year the "Europe Car" visits events and programmes all over Hungary in order to distribute information on the European Union and promote the debate about the future of Europe.

The 50th Europe Day in Hungary took place in the city of Keszthely, by Lake Balaton on 7 June, 2002.

On the Europe Day Mr. József Szájer, member of the Convention launched a homepage entitled "eukonvent.hu", which intends to accelerate the involvement of the civil society in the debate on the future of Europe.
